

POSITIONING

The football read.

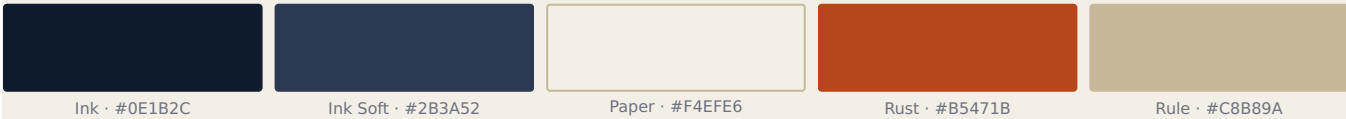

An educational football oddschecker. We don't just show you the prices — we tell you what they mean, who's mispriced, and what the markets are missing. Built by people who actually watch the games.

VOICE

Confident, fan-literate, idiom-native. Speaks football fluently to serious fans without freezing out casuals. Every piece of content is "a read."

"Reading the game" is what coaches praise in smart players who anticipate. We extend that to the markets.

PALETTE

TYPOGRAPHY

Anticipate the play. The Read

Understand the price.

Brazil -115. Argentina +130. The draw +220.

DISPLAY · GEORGIA / EDITORIAL SERIF

UI · SYSTEM SANS (INTER / SF / HELVETICA)

HOMEPAGE HERO

TODAY'S READ · WORLD CUP GROUP STAGE

Brazil are favoured. The draw is the value.

Group F preview, market read, and three numbers worth holding onto. The book is leaning toward Brazil more than the underlying form deserves — and Argentina's price is a gift if you read the second-half xG splits.

-115

BRAZIL

+130

ARGENTINA

+220

DRAW

2.7%

BOOK VIG

CONTENT CARDS

THE READ

France vs. Germany, Group F

Why the draw is mispriced when both sides are managing minutes ahead of the knockouts.

PREVIEW

4 MIN

EXPLAINER

Reading Mbappé's price

Anytime scorer odds tell you more about the bookmaker's model than they do about the player.

101

3 MIN

HOT TAKE

What the sharps are reading

Three lines that have moved hard since Sunday — and what the moves are telling us.

MARKETS

2 MIN

Why this brand. "Read the game" is already football vernacular for tactical intelligence — the educational meaning is bonus, not baggage. Editorial serif masthead reads as a publication, not a tipster site. Rust accent against deep ink + warm paper says thoughtful, not betting site flashing 1XBET banners. The brand promises what we actually do: explain football, including the part where the markets are involved.