

The Touchline

READING FOOTBALL, CALLING THE MARKETS

VOL. 1 · NO. 1

BRAND MOCKUP · V1

WORLD CUP 2026

POSITIONING

From the touchline.

A football publication for fans who want to understand the markets the way pundits read the match. Editorial-first, written from the sideline, never from the betting slip.

VOICE

Pundit-from-the-sideline. Observational, journalistic, slightly literary. Reads like a column you'd find in a Saturday football supplement.

"Touchline take," "from the touchline," "called from the line" — every piece is a vantage point.

PALETTE

Ink · #0B0B0B

Paper · #FFFFFF

Grass · #1F4D2E

Brass · #C9A227

Chalk · #EFEFEA

TYPOGRAPHY

From the touchline

DISPLAY · EDITORIAL SERIF ITALIC (CORMORANT / TIMES)

THE TOUCHLINE TAKE

UI · SYSTEM SANS, ALL CAPS, WIDE TRACKING

HOMEPAGE HERO

FROM THE TOUCHLINE · GROUP F

The book has Brazil too short. We have a different view.

BY THE TOUCHLINE DESK · 4 MIN READ

Three matchdays from the knockouts, the markets are pricing Brazil as the most likely side to lift the cup. Watching them in the flesh tells a different story — one with more rhythm than ruthlessness, and a defence that looks short on options when it matters.

CONTENT CARDS

FROM THE TOUCHLINE

Argentina – France preview

Why the second halves matter more than the lineups when reading this market.

PREVIEW

TOUCHLINE NOTES

Three calls on Group B

The under, the underdog, and the under-priced. A weekly column from the desk.

MARKETS

THE TAKE

The Mbappé question

The top scorer market is rewarding hype. We argue why the books are wrong.

PLAYERS

5 MIN

Why this brand. "The Touchline" reads as a publication first, brand second — broadsheet typography, editorial italic masthead, grass-and-brass palette nods to a stadium without screaming football. Tone is closer to a Saturday supplement column than a betting feed, which is exactly the educational position we want. Major caveat: a competing football media brand The Touchline already operates with ~1.5M followers on X (@TouchlineX, thetouchline.co.uk), plus a separate newsletter at thetouchline.co. Brand collision risk is real and the .com / strong domain situation is poor. This brand wears beautifully but you'd be sharing a name with a much bigger incumbent in the same vertical.